

Amy Kirkcaldy
Career Consultant

As a Career Consultant, Amy collaborates with job seekers to help them discover roles that align with their values and best use their strengths, skills, and interests.

Amy has over 20 years of experience in the field of education at the secondary and higher ed level. A teacher and educator at her core, Amy leverages her skills in deep listening, differentiated learning, and advocacy to help individuals learn the best ways to explore and showcase their own talents and skills. She is passionate about helping others build connections – to other people as well as between ideas, disciplines, resources, and seemingly disparate things in life. She enjoys working with people of all neurotypes and backgrounds and takes a holistic approach to career consulting.

Prior to her time at ClearRock, Amy worked in higher education as a career counselor with a focus on employer engagement and outreach. She also has extensive expertise in college admissions and worked as an Admission and Financial Aid Officer at Harvard College before moving to the other side of the desk to become Associate Director of College Counseling at Milton Academy. Currently she is also a Master Admission Counselor at IvyWise.

Amy earned a bachelor's degree and Spanish Language Citation from Harvard College and a master's in education (and her Massachusetts teaching license in Spanish) from Fitchburg State College. She is a graduate of Stanford's Life Design course and holds an Instructional Coaching Certificate from the Harvard Graduate School of Education. She is also a proud alumna of the Family Leadership Program and Parent Consultant Training Institute in Massachusetts—both of which are disability advocacy programs.

Amy is also the mother of twin boys and a sassy Airedale terrier named Lucy. She lives south of Boston and enjoys reading, cooking, hiking, exploring local areas, running, and acquiring new hobbies and knowledge.
